Indiana ATTORNEY GENERAL

As the state's chief legal officer, the Attorney General is responsible for serving and protecting the citizens of Indiana. Investigating unfair business practices, compiling the "Do not call" list, taking away the licenses of incompetent health professionals and assisting local prosecutors in putting criminals behind bars are just a few of the Attorney General's duties. In addition, this statewide elected official and his staff represent the state government in lawsuits filed against the state.

Originally created as the State Veterinarian Office to prevent and suppress contagious and infectious diseases among livestock, the Board of Animal Health has greatly expanded over the last hundred years. It continues its original mission, but it now also protects public health by controlling the spread of animal diseases, maintaining a vital link in a safe food supply, and assisting people and their animals that are victims of large scale natural disasters. This office works closely with veterinarians, farmers, the U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarians and other state animal health officials to monitor the health status of all animals crossing Indiana's borders.

Indiana is home to the nation's first statewide emergency response network for animal owners. During a flood or tornado, The Board of Animal Health's State Annex for Veterinary Emergencies (SAVE) is prepared to respond.

Indiana Bureau of MOTOR VEHICLES

Testing drivers, licensing drivers and vehicles, and titling vehicles are the top priorities for the BMV.

Working primarily through license branches spread throughout Indiana, the BMV titles and licenses all types of vehicles, from cars and trucks to watercraft. The BMV has reduced the burdensome lines at their licensing branches by automating a number of their services.

Contact the BMV for further details.

Indiana Department of ENVIRONMENT MANAGEMENT

Indiana Department of Environmental Management is charged with managing Indiana's environment. Environmental protection in Indiana has come a long way since 1986, when the Indiana Department of Environmental Management (IDEM) was established. Since then, IDEM has grown to a staff of 900, and employs some of Indiana's most qualified engineers, scientists and environmental project managers specializing in air, land, pollution prevention and water quality issues.

By enforcing environmental laws, and by promoting conservation and pollution prevention, IDEM attempts to make Indiana a clean, healthy place to live.

The IHCDCA promotes, finances, and supports a broad range of housing solutions, from temporary shelters to homeownership.

Its work is done in partnership with developers, lenders, investors and nonprofit organizations that use our financing to serve low and moderate income Hoosiers.

The IHCDCA leverages government and private funds to invest in financially sound, well-designed projects that will benefit communities for many years to come.

Indiana LOTTERY COMMISSION

The Hoosier Lottery was created by the Indiana General Assembly in October 1989. Since that time, more than $1.5 billion in profits has gone to the state. A portion of those revenues are returned to local communities by the legislature. Money from the lottery is also used to fund the pensions of retired teachers and state employees as well as used to help keep Hoosiers excise tax low. The Lottery Commission is responsible for oversight of all games associated with the Hoosier Lottery.

Indiana State DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

The Indiana State Department of Agriculture will change how state government views agricultural needs for Indiana. Lt. Governor Becky Skillman holds the position of Secretary of Agriculture and Rural Development. The Secretary of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Director of Agriculture have positions on the Governor's Cabinet, allowing an advocate for the agriculture community at the table during discussions with the Governor. These positions will elevate Indiana agriculture sector and improve how the state approaches and executes agriculture policies.

Previously, the many different state commissions and agencies dealing with agriculture were scattered within state government. With all areas now in one department, it streamlines the advocacy of agriculture and enhances efficiency with state government.

The Department of Workforce Development administers the unemployment insurance program available to assist Hoosiers.

The Department of Workforce Development is a critical resource for information as to how the job market is progressing. This office offers a wide range of services from posting state and federal jobs as well as private jobs throughout the United States.

You can discover wage trends, unemployment tax information, career planning assistance, and education and training information.

State INFORMATION CENTER

If you need a starting point or quick answer as you are attempting to work through the maze of state government, the State Information Center may be able to help. The office is available to answer questions by phone Monday through Friday from 8 a.m to 5 p.m. If the State Information Center cannot directly answer your questions, they can direct you to the correct agency that will be able to answer more specific questions.

Although this booklet contains information on 40 various agencies, altogether Indiana has more than 70 state agencies, approximately 27,000 employees and more than 800 worksites.

Workers Compensation BOARD OF INDIANA

Whenever an employee is injured on the job, questions arise about how that individual will maintain their quality of life for themselves and their families. Most times, employers have a good policy to assist the injured employee.

However, there are times when conflicts arise between employers and employees. The Worker's Compensation Board exists to help mediate any conflicts when a work-related accident occurs.

In 1991, the Indiana Worker's Compensation and Occupational Diseases Acts were put into place. The legislature, labor, businesses and the medical community worked together to develop the laws.
